BLD Announces New Book:

Compliance Guide For Contractors In California

Phoenix, Arizona, August 10, 2010

The Business Leadership Development Corporation (BLD) announces the publication of its book “Compliance Guide For Contractors In California” in soft cover paperback and ebook editions, with an accompanying web portal.

“Compliance Guide For Contractors In California” is an extremely useful reference guide for contractors doing business in California in both public and private works. The book contains links to over 150 Federal, State, and local websites that contain regulatory information for contractors.

“The book is quick and handy reference guide,” said Nigel A.L. Brooks, President of The Business Leadership Development Corporation. Brooks is an entrepreneur, business owner, management consultant, motivational speaker, and expert author.

“The book is accompanied by a web portal that contains electronic links to the sites and to other material on entrepreneurship, leadership, management, and business administration,” Brooks noted. “The web portal contains an up-to-date version electronic of the book, which can be downloaded onto mobile devices – hence contractors can have access to regulatory information in the field.”

Topics include an overview of the construction industry and the business of contracting, an overview of Federal and State laws and regulations concerning contractors for both public and private works, contents of construction contracts, and the underground economy. The book includes material on project management and managerial accounting techniques to help contractors understand costs and profits.

BLD was founded in 1994, and established its management consulting practice in 2000. BLD provides strategic management consulting, executive coaching and mentoring, professional training, motivational speaking, and publications. BLD develops entrepreneurial, leadership, and managerial competencies in entrepreneurs and executives by building sustainable advantage from vision to value.
